A deeply personal worship song about waiting, trusting and finding God in the silence.

A deeply personal worship song about waiting, trusting and finding God in the silence.

South African Christian artist Bianca releases her new single, “Stillness,” on 11 September 2026 -an intimate worship song born from the questions many of us carry when God seems quiet and the road ahead is unclear.

For Bianca, Stillness comes from a very personal place.

The song reflects a season of asking God difficult questions about purpose, calling and the future. Will the dreams He placed in our hearts come to pass? Are we still walking the path He intended? And what do we do when we pray, but instead of an immediate answer, we are met with silence?

Rather than offering an easy answer, Stillness captures the decision to trust. “At some point I realised that faith isn’t only trusting God when I can see what He is doing. Sometimes faith is staying right where you are, becoming still, and trusting Him even when you cannot see the way forward,” says Bianca.

That message runs through the heart of the song: waiting when there are no answers, holding onto hope when doubt creeps in, and discovering that God has been present all along. The final moments of Stillness move from simply waiting to resting - where fear begins to give way to peace and uncertainty gives way to trust. “For now I wait. For now I trust.”

For Bianca, those words have become more than lyrics. They represent the heart behind this new chapter of her music. “My prayer is that this song finds someone in their own season of waiting. Maybe you’ve prayed and you’re still waiting for an answer. Maybe you don’t know what comes next. I hope Stillness reminds you that silence does not mean God is absent. You can rest in His presence and trust Him, even when you cannot yet see what He is doing.”

Stillness follows Bianca’s continued journey in Christian and worship music and will be supported by an official music video, social media content, radio promotion and digital streaming.

“Stillness” will be available from 11 September 2026 on digital streaming platforms.
